The School of Social Work seeks to advance knowledge and to apply that knowledge for the fulfillment of human potential through the prevention and amelioration of social problems. The school is committed to promoting the values of social and economic justice. Recognizing the complexities of contemporary society, the school dedicates itself through its educational, research, and public service activities to advocating for a society that respects the dignity and achievement of all individuals, families, and communities.

Ranked 14th in the country, the school is known nationally for its Center on Race and Social Problems and its model training and research programs in child welfare, and it equally is regarded as a leader in the overall education of leaders in the field.

This speaker series is part of ongoing efforts to promote scholarship and inform students, faculty, practitioners, and the community through stimulating, intellectual discourse. The school is dedicated to bridging the gap between research and practice, and this lecture series is a tool for disseminating information to the people who need it most and who want to make a difference in their communities.
