  - Providing Depression Care for Older Adult Substance Abusers at Community Agencies
  - Recent analysis of data from the National Household Survey on Drug Abuse indicates that the estimated number of people age 50 or older in need of substance abuse treatment is expected to increase from 1.7 million in 2000/2001 to 4.4 million in 2020. Depressive disorders among opiate abusers have detrimental effects on their well-being and ability to refrain from illegal drug use. Understanding the relationship between substance abuse and psychiatric disorders is critical to providing appropriate services to a growing and aging addicted population in the United States. The purpose of this study is to assess the appropriateness of Problem Solving Therapy (PST), an empirically tested cognitive based therapy for older adults in treating late life depression, as a therapeutic intervention for older individuals with substance abuse disorders. The proposed study will take place at a methadone clinic that serves a diverse clientele--a third are over the age of 50, nearly half (44%) of whom are African-American. A randomized clinical trial comparing 40 participants receiving the PST intervention to 40 participants receiving treatment as usual (TAU) will be conducted.

The capacity of Service Providers in Allegheny County to Understand and Treat Problem Gambling

This project is surveyed all mental health, substance abuse, and faith based providers in Allegheny County, Pennsylvania to assess the capacity of the human service community to engage in prevention and treatment efforts for gambling addiction and gambling-related problems. The specific objectives of the project were to determine the human service delivery network's understanding of gambling issues and impacts, identify current activities focused on prevention and treatment for gambling addiction and gambling-related problems, determine the human service delivery network's capacity for prevention programs and interventions for gambling addiction and related problems, and identify mechanisms to provide training and other resources to enhance agency capacity for prevention and treatment programs.

Using the Chronic Care Model to Develop Treatment Approaches for Depression Among Older Adult Clients at a Methadone Clinic

The purpose of this study is to explore the feasibility of a Chronic Care Model for understanding the needs of aging methadone clients who are depressed and the ability and/or preparedness of a methadone clinic to meet the needs of this population. The study seeks to investigate the perspectives of both methadone clinic staff, clinicians in late-life depression care, and older adult (over the age of 55) opiate addicts in order to propose a Chronic Care Model that is proactive in addressing the issue of depression among older adult methadone clients.

Photovoice: A Community Based Research Project to Involve Older Adult Methadone Clients in the Decisions that Effect Their Lives

The purpose of the project is to address the barriers that prevent older adult African American methadone clients from remaining abstinent from illegal drug use, and help to identify the mental and physical health service needs of this vulnerable population. The project incorporates the methodology of photovoice - a process by which people can identify, represent, and enhance their community through a specific photographic technique.

Shifting Landscape of Social Service Provision

This study draws upon a unique set of panel data on mental health and substance abuse service providers in the Detroit metropolitan area between 2000 and 2004, and explores how providers are affected by growing instability in funding streams and persistent demand for services. In particular, we investigate how changes in social service provision vary by geography within the Detroit metropolitan area.
