We are looking for someone who shows:

- Passion for volunteering and motivating others to volunteer
- A sophisticated awareness of poverty, structural racism, power and privilege, and ability to discuss these issues with diverse groups in ways that empower and open people to learning.
- Enthusiasm for and experience with the intersection of Judaism and social justice.
- An ability to envision a program and execute effectively
- Resilience, flexibility, and is a team player
- Strong public speaking and facilitation skills
- An ability to recruit others to engage in Education Justice or Food Justice by serving alongside them or participating in other activities.
- The ability to organize events, learning sessions and connect to advocacy campaigns that relate to Education Justice or Food Justice
- The ability to enact and model what it means to be a committed volunteer
- The ability to take leadership in internal team roles such as marketing, data management, operations, development, and wellness.