

Multiple Assistant/Associate Faculty Positions

Jane Addams College of Social Work at the University of Illinois Chicago invites applications from prospective tenure track/tenured faculty with expertise and commitment to social work's role in the promotion of social, racial, and economic justice for inner city residents and urban communities. A doctorate in social work or a related field is required. Applicants with a master's degree in social work and at least two years of social work practice experience are strongly preferred.

Applicants for associate professor should have a strong, demonstrated track record of excellence in teaching, community service, funded research, and scholarly productivity. Applicants for assistant professor must show clear evidence of potential for excellence in teaching, service, and research. Appointments start in August 2021.

The college has a strong record of excellent academic programs, integrated research and community service projects with significant external funding. Faculty are actively engaged in socially beneficial research and service projects in the areas of child welfare, health inequities, mental health/substance use, immigration, racism and racial inequities, criminal and juvenile justice, and other areas. The College seeks additional faculty who will help expand these mission-driven, community-based research and service partnerships. Candidates with teaching interests related to organization and community practice or behavioral health are encouraged to apply.

To apply:

- Please submit a letter of application, curriculum vitae, and the name and address of three references to Christopher Mitchell, Faculty Search Committee Chairperson.
