Jane Addams College of Social Work at the University of Illinois Chicago is seeking to fill multiple positions and invites applications from prospective faculty with expertise and commitment to social work’s role in the promotion of social, racial, and economic justice for urban, at-risk communities. A doctorate in social work or a related field is required.

Full Professor Position

Applicants for this senior full professor position should have experience providing research leadership and have a track record of excellence in teaching, community service, research, and scholarly productivity. The applicant will have extensive external funding from federal agencies, national foundations, or similar sources to support a well-established research agenda. Faculty with research expertise in areas including racial and ethnic inequity and disproportionality, juvenile and criminal legal systems, social determinants of health, immigration, behavioral health, organizations and community practice, social stratification and exclusion, and other issues relevant to African American, Latinx and other marginalized populations are strongly encouraged to apply.

Multiple Assistant Professor Positions

Applicants for assistant professor must possess a completed PhD by the time of appointment and must demonstrate clear evidence of potential for excellence in teaching, service, and research. Applicants with at least two years of social work practice experience are strongly preferred.

The College has a strong record of excellent academic programs, integrated research, and community service projects supported with external funding. Faculty are actively engaged in socially beneficial research and service projects in the areas of child welfare, health inequities, chronic health conditions, substance abuse, mental health, social policy, the juvenile and criminal legal systems, trauma-informed youth development in urban and school settings, and other areas. We invite applicants who will help expand these mission-driven, community-based research and service partnerships.
To apply please submit a letter of application, curriculum vitae, writing sample, and the names and address of three references to Christopher Mitchell, Faculty Search Committee Chairperson.
